Campus Alcohol Policy

This Policy has been produced by the Health and Safety Committee of the University of Canterbury, in conjunction with the University of Canterbury Students' Association.

The term "campus" includes all University of Canterbury properties, including field stations, and applies to all activities under the general control of the University of Canterbury.

It is acknowledged that the use of alcohol is an accepted part of socialising for many New Zealanders.

Purpose

1. The University will promote a responsible attitude towards the use of alcohol among staff and students at all times.
2. The University is committed to the view that it is not acceptable to be on campus at any time while intoxicated.
3. The University will require those organising functions on campus, where alcohol is to be available, to provide alternative non-alcoholic drinks at a significantly lower price and to ensure that food is available, and that its consumption is encouraged.
4. The University requires that all servers of alcohol on campus are made aware of responsible serving practices.
5. The University will promote the well-being of its staff and students by providing educational material concerning at-risk drinking.
6. The University will make available to staff and students, at their request, information and assistance relating to treatment for personal problems concerning alcohol use. Confidentiality will be assured.
7. The University expects persons responsible for any function, where alcohol is available on campus, to act as responsible hosts.

This policy is intended to provide choices and practical suggestions on alcohol management. It recognises that some people choose not to drink alcohol and supports those who choose this option.

This policy applies to all formal and informal events organised on campus. Where employees are representing the University they are expected to promote this policy.

Any costs incurred in meeting the requirements of this policy are the responsibility of those on whose behalf the cost(s) were incurred, such as function organisers or participants.

For further details and guidelines to assist with policy compliance, see 'Campus Alcohol Policy' in the UC Policy Library, www.canterbury.ac.nz/ucpolicy.

University Field Activities Policy

Introduction

The University Field Activities Policy has been written to provide a framework within which Departments/Schools must develop and operate their own written field activities policies and procedures. These must be:

1. Consistent with the University's goals and objectives as contained in the UC Charter (Section 1 Charter Goals, Section 2 Special Character) and Profile; and
2. Appropriate and relevant to the Department/School's own goals and objectives, and the educational, and health and safety needs of students and staff.

Field activities vary in their nature and duration and are difficult to categorise; however, this policy is intended to provide compliance with the requirements of the Health and Safety in Employment Act 1992 and its amendments.

This policy is formulated around the following principles: that field activities extend and enrich classroom teaching, and are one of the distinctive characteristics of study at the University of Canterbury that the safety of staff and students is of paramount importance that an assessment of the risks of the proposed field activity has been undertaken that field activities are carried out in a manner which is environmentally sustainable that the expectations and responsibilities of staff and students are clear, and accepted by both groups.

A checklist of information for students is outlined in Appendix 1 at the end of this policy. This policy should be read in conjunction with the Field Activities General Safety Requirements for Students policy.

Definitions

Academic visitors – visitors to the University, for example Erskine visitors, academic staff on exchange or Crown Research Institute scientists working in collaboration with University staff.

Activity leader – the person who has the authority to make decisions in relation to the activities of the field party

Campus – includes all University properties, including field stations, which are owned or controlled by the University of Canterbury.

Field activity – teaching, learning or research that takes place outside a classroom, library or laboratory. Field activities will usually be at least partially outdoors.

Field course – a university course that is primarily taught outside the classroom or laboratory.

Field Activities: General Safety Requirements for Students

Introduction

The following are general safety requirements for all students undertaking field activities at the University of Canterbury particularly those enrolled in field work courses or undertaking independent field work. They may be supplemented by specific rules or guidelines issued by individual departments/schools and come under the

Human Ethics Committee

The University of Canterbury aims to promote excellent and ethical research. To this end it has established a Human Ethics Committee responsible to the Vice-Chancellor to ensure that researchers whose work involves human participants will conduct their work

- (i) making arrangements for students on tour to sit a test, at the same time as that scheduled for the test, under the supervision of the team manager or coach, or other suitable person;
  - (ii) permitting the sitting of the test or similar test prior to the departure of students provided that by so doing there is no problem over security;
- c) That where students are to be absent from tests or at times scheduled for submission of assessment and wish for special arrangements to be made, and where Departments are able to make special arrangements, students must give adequate notice of absence to the Heads of Departments so that Departments have time to organise and/or approve any such special arrangements.
- d) That Departments publicise their policies by appropriate means - through inclusion in departmental handbooks, course outlines, departmental handbooks, and on noticeboards.

5. When, on the basis of applications to enrol, class size is greater than that which can be accommodated in one stream, but no more than 20 percent greater, only a single stream is timetabled but video-recording used to manage excess numbers at the start of the semester.

6. At no time shall more students be accommodated in a lecture theatre than safety regulations permit. In cases such as 4 and 5 above seating would be allocated on a "first come" basis with those students who are not accommodated expected to access the lecture by WebCT.

7. The cost of resourcing for video-recording will be a cost against the College (which may, if it chooses, pass it on to the Department/School).

Note: For further information about this policy please contact the Academic Policy Manager on ext. 6950.

Over-Flow Teaching of Large Classes Policy

Introduction

The policy on over-flow teaching has been developed by the Teaching and Learning Committee, in consultation with the Facilities Advisory Committee, Information Technology Department and the Audio-Visual Committee. Its purpose is to provide guidance to departments with class enrolments greater than can be accommodated in two lecturing streams.

Definitions

Video-linking: a class is relayed by video to an adjacent room

Video-streaming: the lecture is video-recorded for WebCT storage and accessed by students in their own time.

Policy

The Academic Board does not support video-linking. Strategies to manage large classes should be such as to enhance student learning. Where over-flow teaching is necessary video-streaming is preferred to video-linking.

Procedures

1. Large classes (300+) should be timetabled first, with priority use of large lecture theatres.
2. Where it is necessary to run two streams, and total numbers will fit within the two streams, students should be allocated to each stream, rather than have free choice of which stream to attend (subject to plea to avoid timetable clashes).
3. If a course requires two streams it is expected that these will be taught face-to-face, or in the same manner.
4. Where the class cannot be accommodated in two streams, classes might be video-recorded for replay on WebCT. Lecture theatres used must be suitable for such recording. Lecturers using this resource need to work with AV staff to determine the most appropriate presentation.
