

She is also the Deputy Chair of the Community Economies Institute, and she jokes that she has swapped University administration for administration of an international non-profit with fifty core members and the associated Community Economies Research Network that has nearly 300 members from all parts of the globe

Jenny says: