Christopher Johnson from the University of Wisconsin, USA: Semester 1 2019

Christopher and his family enjoying Aoetearoa New Zealand

Where have you come from, and what do you teach?

I am on the faculty of computer science at the University of Wisconsin, Eau Claire. I regularly teach courses on programming languages, game development, and web design. At UC, I am teaching a 400-level course on mobile app development. In this course we write software that integrates into daily life. Our apps sense the physical world through various sensors, manage our media, and keep us connected to friends.